Personal skills and competences

Clinical and scientific activities have been particularly dedicated to Surgical Oncology; the knowledge of surgical techniques has been combined with modern concepts in the fields of oncology, radiotherapy and molecular biology focused to the multidisciplinary approach. Particular attention has been dedicated to gastric cancer, as Tuscany is a high-risk area for this neoplasm.

Studies on clinical utility of serum tumor markers in the follow-up, extended lymphadenectomy prognostic factors and translational research for gastric cancer are particularly relevant. A statistical model to predict recurrence of gastric cancer is now used in several Italian and European Centers.

Funding member of the Italian Research Group for Gastric Cancer (GIRCG), which includes several centers specialized in gastric cancer surgery. From 2006 he is Responsible of the Scientific Secretary of the group, and coordinated about 50 multicenter research studies, published on international journals. In 2016, he coordinated the "GIRCG Guidelines for gastric cancer staging and treatment-2015", the official Italian guidelines published on Gastric Cancer.

Collaboration with other international research groups: IPATIMUP (Porto), University of Munich, University of Seoul, University of San Paolo.

Particular attention has been also given to the use of advanced techniques in Surgical Oncology, as intraperitoneal chemohyperthermia (HIPEC, PIPAC) and locoregional treatments, as well as surgical treatment of colorectal, liver and pancreatic cancer.

From 2015 is Coordinator of Upper GI Multidisciplinary Oncological Group (GOM), Policlinico Le Scotte, Siena.
